DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

Regarding claim 1, "a relatively high pressure" in line 4 is not clear what level of high pressure is considered as "a relatively high pressure."

Regarding claim 1, "a relatively low pressure" in line 5 is not clear what level of low pressure is considered as "a relatively low pressure."

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claims 1-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103 (a) as being unpatentable over Cho (KR 98050853 A) in view of Yoshioka (JP 2003-104046), and further in view of Natkin et al. (US 2003/0098011 A1).

Regarding claims 1-6, Cho discloses a braking device fitted with an air conditioning circuit containing a cooling fluid (see fig.), a pneumatic brake booster (1) comprising a variable volume working chamber and a control valve (3) but does not disclose a compressor and an expansion valve, and the gaseous fluid at different pressure levels as claimed. However, Yoshioka discloses a brake booster (see fig. 1; see also [0005]-[0006]) in communication with air conditioning system (13), wherein the system also includes a compressor and an expansion valve (9) to provide gaseous fluid at different pressure levels ([0016] and [0020]-[0023]). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the system of Cho as taught by Yoshioka in order to provide adequate force and pressure to the system so that the air conditioner can be operated appropriately without having any effect on the brake booster and thus making the system more efficient and reliable.

The modified system of Cho discloses all claimed limitations but fails to disclose selective deliverance of fluid by claimed fluid sources through separate conduits. However, Natkin discloses an engine charge air conditioning system including a charge booster and an intercooler for selectively transferring heat from charge air flowing from the booster through separate lines (see fig. 1 and abstract and [0006]-[0008]). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to provide separate conduits to be selective operated with different pressure as taught by Natkin in the modified system of Cho in order to provide proper pressure to the designated area of the system making the system more reliable.
